BLACK AND GLOBAL STUDIES

Every Thursday 1 pm starting w/c 31/01/22

Open exclusively to our Black and Global Majority Students

The Black and Global Module has been going really well this semester as we have explored Love, Self-Care and our Bodies and how they all play key roles in helping build resistance to overcome racial trauma.

This module is a safe space for our Black and Global Majority students. If you are a student and would like to attend the module please contact us. If you are a member of staff, we can emphasise enough how useful these workshops are for our Black and Global Majority students.

During March the workshops will run online via Teams, if you would like access to the Canvas Topic, please contact us: jedi@wlv.ac.uk

Insight: What can you do to improve your allyship?

Listen

Listen to what Black and Global Majority people are saying. Check-in on your Black and Global Majority friends, family and colleagues and ask what you can do to support them

Boost the voices of Black and Global Majority people

On social media, share threads/posts with donation links and resources and ways to support.

Educate yourself

Do your own research and do not ask or expect Black and Global Majority people to educate you. The JEDI website has some great resources to help on this journey.

Acknowledge your privilege

Understand that you have a privilege and think about how you can use this privilege to make change and educate others in your community.

THE GRAPEVINE

Upcoming Café: 31st March, 1 pm

Critical Conversation Café – Open to all staff and students

Our Critical Conversation Cafes are an open and informal space, and a real opportunity to facilitate stimulating debate, critical reflection and awareness whilst discussing a range of topics led by participants. In February, we explored White Allyship and asked is it working or is it simply performative? These conversations are thought-provoking and powerful, if you would like to attend please provisionally put this date and time in your diary and we will be sending out invites to everyone on our mailing list.

If you would like to host a future café, we want to hear from you!
